

Vyr & Mey

“Ice”

Episode 06

Version 02 – 6/12/2005

Mey appears running, suddenly he slips and falls to the floor.

Mey realizes that the floor is slippery because it is wet and as he walks forward a bit he realizes that Vyr is making a sculpture in a block of ice.

Mey likes the idea and starts to blow his hand, but, instead of warming it up, an ice cube appears. He repeats the process several times until forming a reasonable number of ice cubes.

Vyr perceives that Mey has joined in the fun and gets mad. He starts sculpting more quickly.

Mey ends up making a sculpture in a cube shape.

Vyr is surprised at the deformed face of Mey’s sculpture and then looks at his own sculpture. He makes a quick exit and returns with another block. He starts sculpting.

Mey starts to prepare more cubes. Vyr is becoming increasingly fast and putting more blocks on the high sculpture.

Mey makes another cube and now needs to raise his head to see Vyr’s sculpture.

Vyr finishes the sculpture, exhausted. We see that he sculpted a giant totem pole, several meters tall, and which ends up falling on top of him.

Mey offers Vyr a glass of ice lemonade, with the last cubes that he made.

Lettering: “There is a limit between fun and obsession”